Getting approval to deliver...

Environment for Business

What is the Environment for Business course?

Environment for Business is for managers and supervisors who require an awareness of environmental impact and sustainability. Taking a 'business first' approach to the risks, opportunities and operational considerations associated with environmental management, the course outlines the ways in which businesses can gain a competitive advantage by engaging with and effectively managing the environmental aspects of their activities. Environment for Business presents a compelling case for making environmental management a key and core aspect of business as usual, adding value to business operations, unlocking future opportunities, and providing a realistic and practical overview of the ways and extent to which an organisation might address its environmental risks and opportunities.

Environment for Business

- a short course (five hours of face-to-face contact) covering environmental issues that managers are responsible for
- flexibility to deliver the course either in-house or as a scheduled public course
- high-quality graphics created exclusively for the course
- a sophisticated and fun presentation
- first-class technical content, based on what delegates need to know in practice
- no jargon or off-putting legal language
- clear scenarios that people can relate to

Marking success in Environment for Business
Delegates who successfully complete the course receive IOSH's Environment for Business certificate.

Environment for Business delivers...

Who is Environment for Business for?

Environment for Business is for anyone in a management or supervisory role who wants to learn how organisations can benefit from a positive environmental culture.

What will delegates get out of it?

The course encourages individuals to consider their role(s) in tackling environmental issues in their workplace.

What will employers get out of it?

- Improved, organisation-wide, environmental awareness culture and appreciation of environmental impact
- Active staff involvement to improve the workplace and organisational processes
- Enhanced reputation within their supply chain
- Globally-recognised and respected certificated training for their managers and supervisors
- Peace of mind offered by training that's designed and quality-assured by the Chartered body for safety and health professionals
- Flexibility: the programme can be delivered in time-slots that suit the business

What will trainers get out of it?

- Straightforward, high-quality training designed by a team of specialists
- A ready-to-go training programme – we've done the hard work, saving trainers the headache and the hassle
- Full back-up from our support team on every aspect of training, from advice on the training environment to guidance on marking assessments
- Free technical updates

And the end results are...

- improved, organisation-wide environmental awareness culture
- proactive staff involvement to improve the workplace
- enhanced reputation in the supply chain.

Environment for Business covers...

- What is meant by the term 'environment'
In module one, delegates will find out about natural cycles, such as those for carbon and water. They'll also look at the way in which the natural world self-regulates, and the differences between renewable and non-renewable resources.
- How the environment can impact upon organisations
In the second module, guided discussions and exercises relate learning back to the delegate's workplace. Delegates will examine how the environment can impact on their organisation and its outputs, as well as on their roles in the organisation.
- How organisations can impact the environment
Again, through guided discussions and exercises, in module three, delegates will focus on the ways in which their workplace impacts on the environment. They'll also look at ways in which their organisation's processes or outputs could be altered to become more sustainable.
- Ways in which organisations can minimise environmental risks, and maximise sustainable opportunities
In module four, delegates will investigate different types of environmental management system, how they have evolved over time, and key considerations when looking to move an organisation towards environmentally sound and sustainable solutions.

Each module is backed by crystal-clear examples and recognisable scenarios. Summaries reinforce the key learning points.

Delegates taking the Environment for Business course will be assessed using a multi-format paper made up of 13 questions.

Environment for Business includes...

- access to an online platform, which enables trainers to deliver the face-to-face course to delegates
- a course presentation, featuring engaging graphics and case studies
- a digital set of trainer notes (a step-by-step guidance on delivering the course)
- a digital bank of assessment papers and marking papers
- supporting documents and handouts to download and print
- a delegate workbook (extra fee applies).

The animated presentation is downloaded from a secure online platform. You get access to IOSH's Course Management System (CMS) to help you manage and deliver IOSH-produced courses through one central, web-based platform. The CMS allows us to keep our course content up to date, with the latest guidance.

It also enables you to create personalised or translated versions of IOSH courses to address specific training needs.

The presentation is compatible on Windows with Internet Explorer version 11, Chrome and Firefox (latest versions). It's also compatible on Macs with Safari and Chrome (latest versions).

Once you log in to the CMS, it's easy to run or manage your licensed courses, manage any other trainer users who are assigned to your training provider account, and produce information on course usage. We've produced a dedicated extension for the Chrome browser for you to install, so that you can deliver IOSH courses offline – anytime, anywhere, without an internet connection.

Delivering Environment for Business

If you want to run Environment for Business, you or someone from your organisation must be the 'nominated IOSH member'. It's this person's responsibility to oversee the course and act as the first line of quality control. Centrally, quality control is provided by IOSH's Training team.

All trainers who deliver Environment for Business need to have at least:

- Technical membership of IOSH (a safety and health qualification is required) – all members' CPD must be in good standing
 - a level 3 (QCF) qualification in the environment sector or two years' practical experience in the environment field
 - an adult training qualification at level 3 (QCF), such as an Award in Education and Training
- OR
- two years' substantial, face-to-face training delivery experience.
